- “Plain Talk in Complex Times“ Focuses on Reaching Diverse Audiences through Effective Communication -

RESTON, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--MAXIMUS, a leading provider of government services worldwide, announced today that it will bring together communication experts and decision-makers for the second annual MAXIMUS Center for Health Literacy Conference, “Plain Talk in Complex Times.” The conference, which is co-sponsored by the American Public Health Association, will take place September 22-23, 2011 in Arlington, Virginia.

“Plain Talk in Complex Times” will offer practical solutions for communicating complex health information and will also make it possible for health professionals to earn continuing education credits. The conference is a gathering of public health experts, researchers, educators, medical practitioners and professionals tasked with clearly communicating to diverse audiences. This year’s conference will focus on the key topics of Web usability and accessibility, eHealth literacy and oral communication.

Confirmed speakers and workshop presenters currently scheduled include:

- Eva Anderson, MFA, creative director and principal at Glasswing Design

“Effective communication with consumers is a critical component of public programs. This is particularly evident in public health insurance programs where governments must overcome communication and outreach challenges in order to effectively meet the requirements of the HITECH Act and the Affordable Care Act,” commented Bruce Caswell, President and General Manager of MAXIMUS Health Services. “The Plain Talk conference will serve as a great dialogue platform for sharing practical methods for reaching consumers of public programs, enabling them to make informed choices about their health and wellbeing.”

“Plain Talk in Complex Times” will take place at the Renaissance Arlington Capital View Hotel.
