Newmont to Voluntarily Delist From Toronto Stock Exchange

2025-09-10

Newmont to Maintain Listings on the NYSE, ASX and PNGX Exchanges

DENVER--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Newmont Corporation (NYSE: NEM, TSX: NGT, ASX: NEM, PNGX: NEM) ("Newmont" or the "Company") announces that it has applied for a voluntary delisting of its common shares (the "Shares") from the Toronto Stock Exchange (the "TSX"), which is expected to be effective on or about the close of trading September 24, 2025. In addition to its primary listing on the New York Stock Exchange (the "NYSE"), Newmont continues to support its listings on the Australian Securities Exchange (the "ASX") and the Papua New Guinea Stock Exchange (the "PNGX").

The Company is voluntarily delisting from the TSX due to low trading volumes, and expects the TSX delisting to improve administrative efficiency and reduce costs for the benefit of Newmont's shareholders. Shareholders holding Shares trading on the TSX should consult their broker or financial advisor to explore the various options available to trade their Shares and are encouraged to maintain Shares in the Company's primary listing on the NYSE.

Newmont's broader investor base will continue to benefit from the ability to trade the Shares across multiple exchanges, including the NYSE, the ASX and the PNGX under the symbol "NEM".

The Company does not intend to seek security holder approval in connection with the delisting as the Shares currently trade on acceptable alternative markets to the TSX.
