Let's take you back to when you first started in your career. You were curious, eager and excited to learn everything you could. Back then, conference calls were a joy. You had a group of peers, influencers and management available at once to discuss business and what you could do to improve it. Fast forward to today, you hate conference calls. As a matter of fact, you could very well loathe them and look for any excuse to find a better use of your time. There are times where shotty cell service or noisy backgrounds killed your conference call productivity, until now. From hustling city streets to coffee breaks at your local café, enjoy clear conversations anywhere with Plantronics unique WindSmart technology in the new Voyager 5200.

What makes the Plantronics Voyager 5200 stand out from other Bluetooth headsets? The Voyager 5200 features four-mic noise cancelling and is equipped to cancel disruptive background noise traffic or crowds. Balanced with six layers of WindSmart technology, it ensures your voice comes through clearly indoors or outdoors. The technology behind the Voyager truly optimizes HD voice clarity on wideband devices and networks.

Once fully charged (which takes about 90 minutes using the included Micro USB connection) it's power packed to withstand up to seven hours of talk time. The Voyager 5200 even has Multipoint technology which empowers you stay connected and answer calls on two Bluetooth enabled phones. The enhanced voice alerts announce talk-time, caller ID and more. The sweat proof nano-coating prevents moisture damage from sweat or rain while in use. No matter if you're conducting a call during your commute or in the midst of a sweaty workout, the Voyager 5200 keeps your conversation concise and clear no matter what.

The Voyager 5200 even has an optional charging case that provides up to 14 hours of recharging while on the go.

There are just some accessories that make your job easier, and personally the Voyager 5200 by Plantronics has made me fall in love with weekly conference calls all over again!
