"Being recognized by Forbes for the fifth year in a row is a testament to the strides we're making in advancing inclusion, equity and belonging across our global teams," said Shiela Vinczeller, Aptar's Chief Human Resources Officer. "When we honor and appreciate each person's unique strengths, we build a workplace where everyone has the opportunity to achieve their full potential."

"We are proud to be recognized as one of the World's Top Companies for Women - a reflection of our meaningful progress to further a workplace where everyone is encouraged to participate in numerous events that promote inclusivity," said Marcia Thomas, Chief Diversity Officer.

This award is presented on behalf of Forbes and Statista, a leading market research firm. Data for the "World's Top Companies for Women" is based on an anonymous survey of over 120,000 women working in 36 countries. In this survey, participants are asked to evaluate companies based on three areas: employer brand, public opinion and leadership score. These surveys are conducted periodically over a two-year period.
