Digital-first tools have supported staff demands

Previously, the City of Largo published paper- or PDF-first budget books, which required staff to manually transfer and validate data repeatedly, resulting in a time-intensive process. The City is now focusing on digital-first initiatives, as supported by Budget Book Studio, while maintaining the capability to export to PDF and print whenever needed. Budget Book Studio's automation functionality dramatically streamlines the creation of the budget book for city staff by auto-generating content such as department pages, fund summaries, and capital project sheets, significantly reducing the time and manual effort needed to compile, format, and update the annual budget book.

With Budget Book Studio, the City of Largo has introduced a new way for residents to engage and understand financial documents with its easy-to-navigate and engaging features in its digital budget book: real-time data integrations for data updates, interactive elements and dashboard visualizations, linking to related data points, and tracking changes over time, among others. In addition to an interactive, digital experience, Euna Budget's Budget Book Studio offers best-in-class print support, enabling finance teams to quickly export digital budget books to PDF files for on-demand printing.

Beyond just budget books, Budget Book Studio is a versatile financial document editing and publishing tool.

"At its core, Budget Book Studio simplifies the creation of digital or print financial documents, making them more engaging and shareable once published," said Jeffrey Goldstein, Sr. Product Director of Euna Budget, "With Budget Book Studio, you can now also publish your strategic plan – along with other critical financial documents – helping to build trust and awareness of your community's vision."
