Alarm.com Earns Top Workplace Honors from The Washington Post

TYSONS, Va., June 17, 2016 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Alarm.com (Nasdaq:ALRM), the leading platform solution for the connected home and business, has been named a Top Workplace by the Washington Post for 2016. The award, based entirely on employee feedback, recognizes companies for employee engagement, quality of leadership, work-life balance, pay, benefits and corporate culture. The company, which moved to its new state-of-the-art headquarters in Tysons earlier this year, is now a Top Workplace in the Washington DC area for two years running.

"Top Workplace recognition is a remarkable reflection of our exceptional culture and our highly-engaged employees," said Victoria Schillinger, Alarm.com's Vice President of Human Resources. "Everyone at Alarm.com contributes to a unique working environment where employees find real satisfaction in creating and delivering innovative technology that makes everyday life safer, smarter and easier for millions of people around the world."

Alarm.com employees are encouraged to innovate, collaborate and 'own their success' as they develop concepts and ideas into practical solutions that power millions of properties. This energetic, interactive culture brings teams together to build and deploy high-impact technology that changes the way that people interact with their homes and small businesses.

Ensuring that all employees feel ownership of Alarm.com's technology is a priority from day one. All new hires attend a fully immersive, two-week new hire program where they get hands-on with Alarm.com's solutions, including smart home security systems, HD video cameras, and smart thermostats.

Alarm.com provides best in class benefits, career growth opportunities and a team-oriented workplace. Along with 100 percent paid medical, Alarm.com offers additional benefits like an educational assistance program, onsite fitness classes and gym subsidies, in-suite showers, and—of course—Alarm.com technology for employees' homes. Flexible work schedules and a casual dress environment contribute to the entrepreneurial, high-energy work environment at Alarm.com.
