6/25/2024

Employee responses earn the IT solutions integrator its latest Top Workplaces award

FAIRFAX, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- ECS, a leader in advanced technology, science, and engineering solutions and ASGN (NYSE: ASGN) brand, has won its seventh Top Workplaces award from The Washington Post. ECS is one of 250 organizations, across four size categories, to receive 2024 Top Workplaces recognition.

To determine Top Workplaces award winners, The Post gathers input from tens of thousands of Washington-area employees through a 24-question survey. Employees rank their organizations on issues such as employee development, employee appreciation, pay, and work-life balance.

ECS is dedicated to enhancing the employee experience through continuous investment. The company actively supports ongoing employee training, skill growth, and education. Employees have the opportunity to nominate charitable causes for quarterly fundraising drives, with ECS supporting them with matching donations. Additionally, the annual ECS Pitch Day event allows employees to present new product and service ideas, offering a chance to bring these innovations to life. Finally, the company supports 10 diverse employee resource groups (e.g., Women Professionals, Black Professionals, LGBTQIA+ Professionals) that foster an inclusive and supportive culture.

"Winning another Top Workplaces award is an honor, but it's also an illustration of the excellence, drive, and commitment to building community that our ECSers bring to work every single day," said John Heneghan, president of ECS. "ECS will continue to invest in our employees to help them bring their best selves to the table, but ultimately, it's their commitment to making that vision a reality that makes ECS such a great place to work."
