¹ Non-GAAP financial measure; see definition and reconciliation at the end of this Presentation

² In connection with the preparation of this presentation, the Company has used its updated definition of Adjusted EBITDA, which includes an addback of Company's stock-based compensation expense. This revised definition of Adjusted EBITDA was used to calculate Adjusted EBITDA set forth above and will be used by the Company on a go-forward basis for purposes of all future Adjusted EBITDA disclosures. This definitional change was driven by the Company's belief that adding back the expense associated with stock-based compensation for purposes of the computation of Adjusted EBITDA will provide the Company's investors with a better understanding of our underlying performance from period to period and enable them to better compare our performance against that of our peer companies, many of which also include an addback of stock-based compensation expense in computing Adjusted EBITDA.

FY2026 Guidance

- Given the recently completed Kito Crosby acquisition and the pending divestiture of our U.S. power chain hoist and chain operations, the Company is withdrawing FY26 guidance due to:
 - Uncertainty around the timing of the divestiture
 - Regulatory limitations on information sharing with or from Kito Crosby prior to closing
 - The integration of our financial processes within Kito Crosby
- Consistent with prior years' convention, we will provide an updated financial outlook and issue financial guidance for fiscal 2027 in conjunction with our fourth quarter fiscal 2026 earnings release in late May of 2026.
- Certain transaction-related expenses, purchase accounting adjustments and early integration costs will be incurred in Q4 FY26. The impact of these costs as well as higher interest expense is expected to be dilutive to GAAP earnings per share in Q4 FY26.
